Grenfell Tower to Become Memorial; Steve McQueen Working on Tribute

And in further New York news – the city’s art nonprofit Swiss Institute has announced that it will open a new space in the East Village designed by Selldorf Architects, after raising USD$3.5 million. Its new space launches on 21 June 2018 with an inaugural exhibition, ‘Readymades Belong to Everyone’, looking at the exchange between artists, architects and found urban objects. Board Chair Maja Hoffmann commented: ‘We are committed to continuing a legacy of generative experimentation and to fostering an environment in the East Village in which art can thrive, and be open to all.’ The art space has been located at a temporary site in Tribeca since August 2016.
